January 8 - 14, 2017 - Omni Barton Creek Resort & Spa - Austin, Texas

Prepare your operation to face the complex management issues of today and tomorrow

Since 1991, The Executive Program for Agricultural Producers, TEPAP, has been equipping agribusiness leaders to develop professional management practices, improve family communication, and provide a path forward for business growth, transition, and succession planning.

With the generous support of the Farm Credit System, John Deere, DTN, BASF, Texas A&M AgriLife Extension and Texas A&M University, TEPAP has taught over 1900 participants advanced agribusiness topics such as:

- Strategic management
- Leadership
- Salesmanship
- Family business management
- Negotiation strategies
- Human relations
- Financial management
- Macroeconomics
- Workplace accountability

Become more professional in your management and leadership skills

When you attend TEPAP, you'll spend an intensive week in classroom sessions alongside some of the leading producers in the country and around the world taught by the nation’s most prominent faculty with experience and expertise in issues of strategic management. After daily class sessions, you'll take part in individual study and roundtable discussions (affectionately called ‘bear pits’) along with your classmates and instructors.

The study will be intensive and the days will be full, but at the end of your session, you'll be equipped with management tools, ideas, and strategies to face the challenges of running farms, ranches, and agribusinesses today and tomorrow. Go to: tepap.tamu.edu for more registration information, participation forms, and program updates.
Extensive Focus on Today’s Farm Business and Management Issues

Over the past 27 years, TEPAP participants have covered the spectrum of commodity producers, differentiated product/niche market operations, and qualified suppliers for coordinated supply chains. They have represented a variety of business arrangements and have included everything from single-site farms and ranches to multi-county, multi-state, and even multi-national operations. The vast majority come from closely held family and owner-managed businesses.

TEPAP is organized into two concurrent, one week sessions. First time participants will need to enroll in Unit 1. Your week of instruction will encompass:

- Family Business Management
- Financial Management I
- Understanding & Working with Different Personalities I
- Process Improvement
- Megatrends
- Human Resources Management I
- Strategic Management
- Managing Key Challenges and Decision Making
- Macroeconomics: Impacts on Farm Level Decision Making
- Public Relations Plans: What, Why and How

Those who have completed Unit 1 are eligible to enroll in Unit 2. The topics covered in this week are:

- Business Transfer & Estate Planning
- Financial Management II
- How Your World Works
- Salesmanship
- Accountability
- Leadership & Managing Change
- Human Resources Management II
- Family Business Governance and Financial Management
- Profitable Negotiation
- Strategic Positioning

“Attending this course and connecting with the quality of people at this event should be on the bucket list of every progressive farm business.”

-Terry Aberhart, Canada
To Prospective Participants,

Please accept this invitation to join us for The Executive Program for Agricultural Producers (TEPAP), January 8-14, 2017 in Austin, Texas. Since its inception, TEPAP has brought together farmers, ranchers, and agribusiness men and women who want to manage their organizations more professionally - from managing opportunities of growth and expansion to issues of transition and succession planning. Class members come to TEPAP from all over the world to meet with faculty comprised of experts in the fields of business and academics. Class size is limited to enhance this learning environment that is built on dialogue and discussion, instruction and interaction.

When Danny Klinefelter originated TEPAP 27 years ago, he designed it around the following 7 principles:

- The only truly sustainable competitive advantage is the ability to learn and adapt faster than your competition.
- Strategic management is the ability to anticipate, adapt to, drive and capitalize on change.
- The best organizations spend as much time analyzing what they need to stop doing as they do evaluating new opportunities.
- The most successful businesses are learning organizations. This means that everyone in the business needs to recognize that someone, somewhere, has a better idea or way of doing things, and they need to be compelled to find it, learn it, adapt it, and continually improve it.
- Success requires continuous management improvement at a rate set by the leading edge of your competition and not by your current comfort zone.
- The main difference between top 10 percent and the rest of the top 25 percent is their timing, in terms of when to enter, expand, cut back or exit; whether it’s an investment, a marketing decision or a business activity.
- The future will always belong to those who see the possibilities before they become obvious to the typical producer.

If this sounds like a program that would benefit you, your partners, and your business, I invite you to become part of the TEPAP family. I hope to see you in Austin!

Mark Welch
